BJU REVIEW

BOB JONES Uni

WINTER 1989

The Christmas Season at BJU

Students decorate their doors with pictures, their rooms with Christmas trees and their halls with brightly colored bulbs. The lights on the bridge of nations are turned to red and green, and the social parlor is decorated with two huge trees. Choirs perform a Christmas classic, the Faculty Brass quintet gives a Christmas concert, and the Christmas vespers program is a favorite of students and visitors alike. The excitement of the Christmas season at BJU culminates early on a Friday morning, as the students leave to go home for the Holidays. It may not be just like home, but the Christmas season at BJU is a beautiful and enjoyable time, and, most importantly, the real reason for the Christmas season is not forgotten.

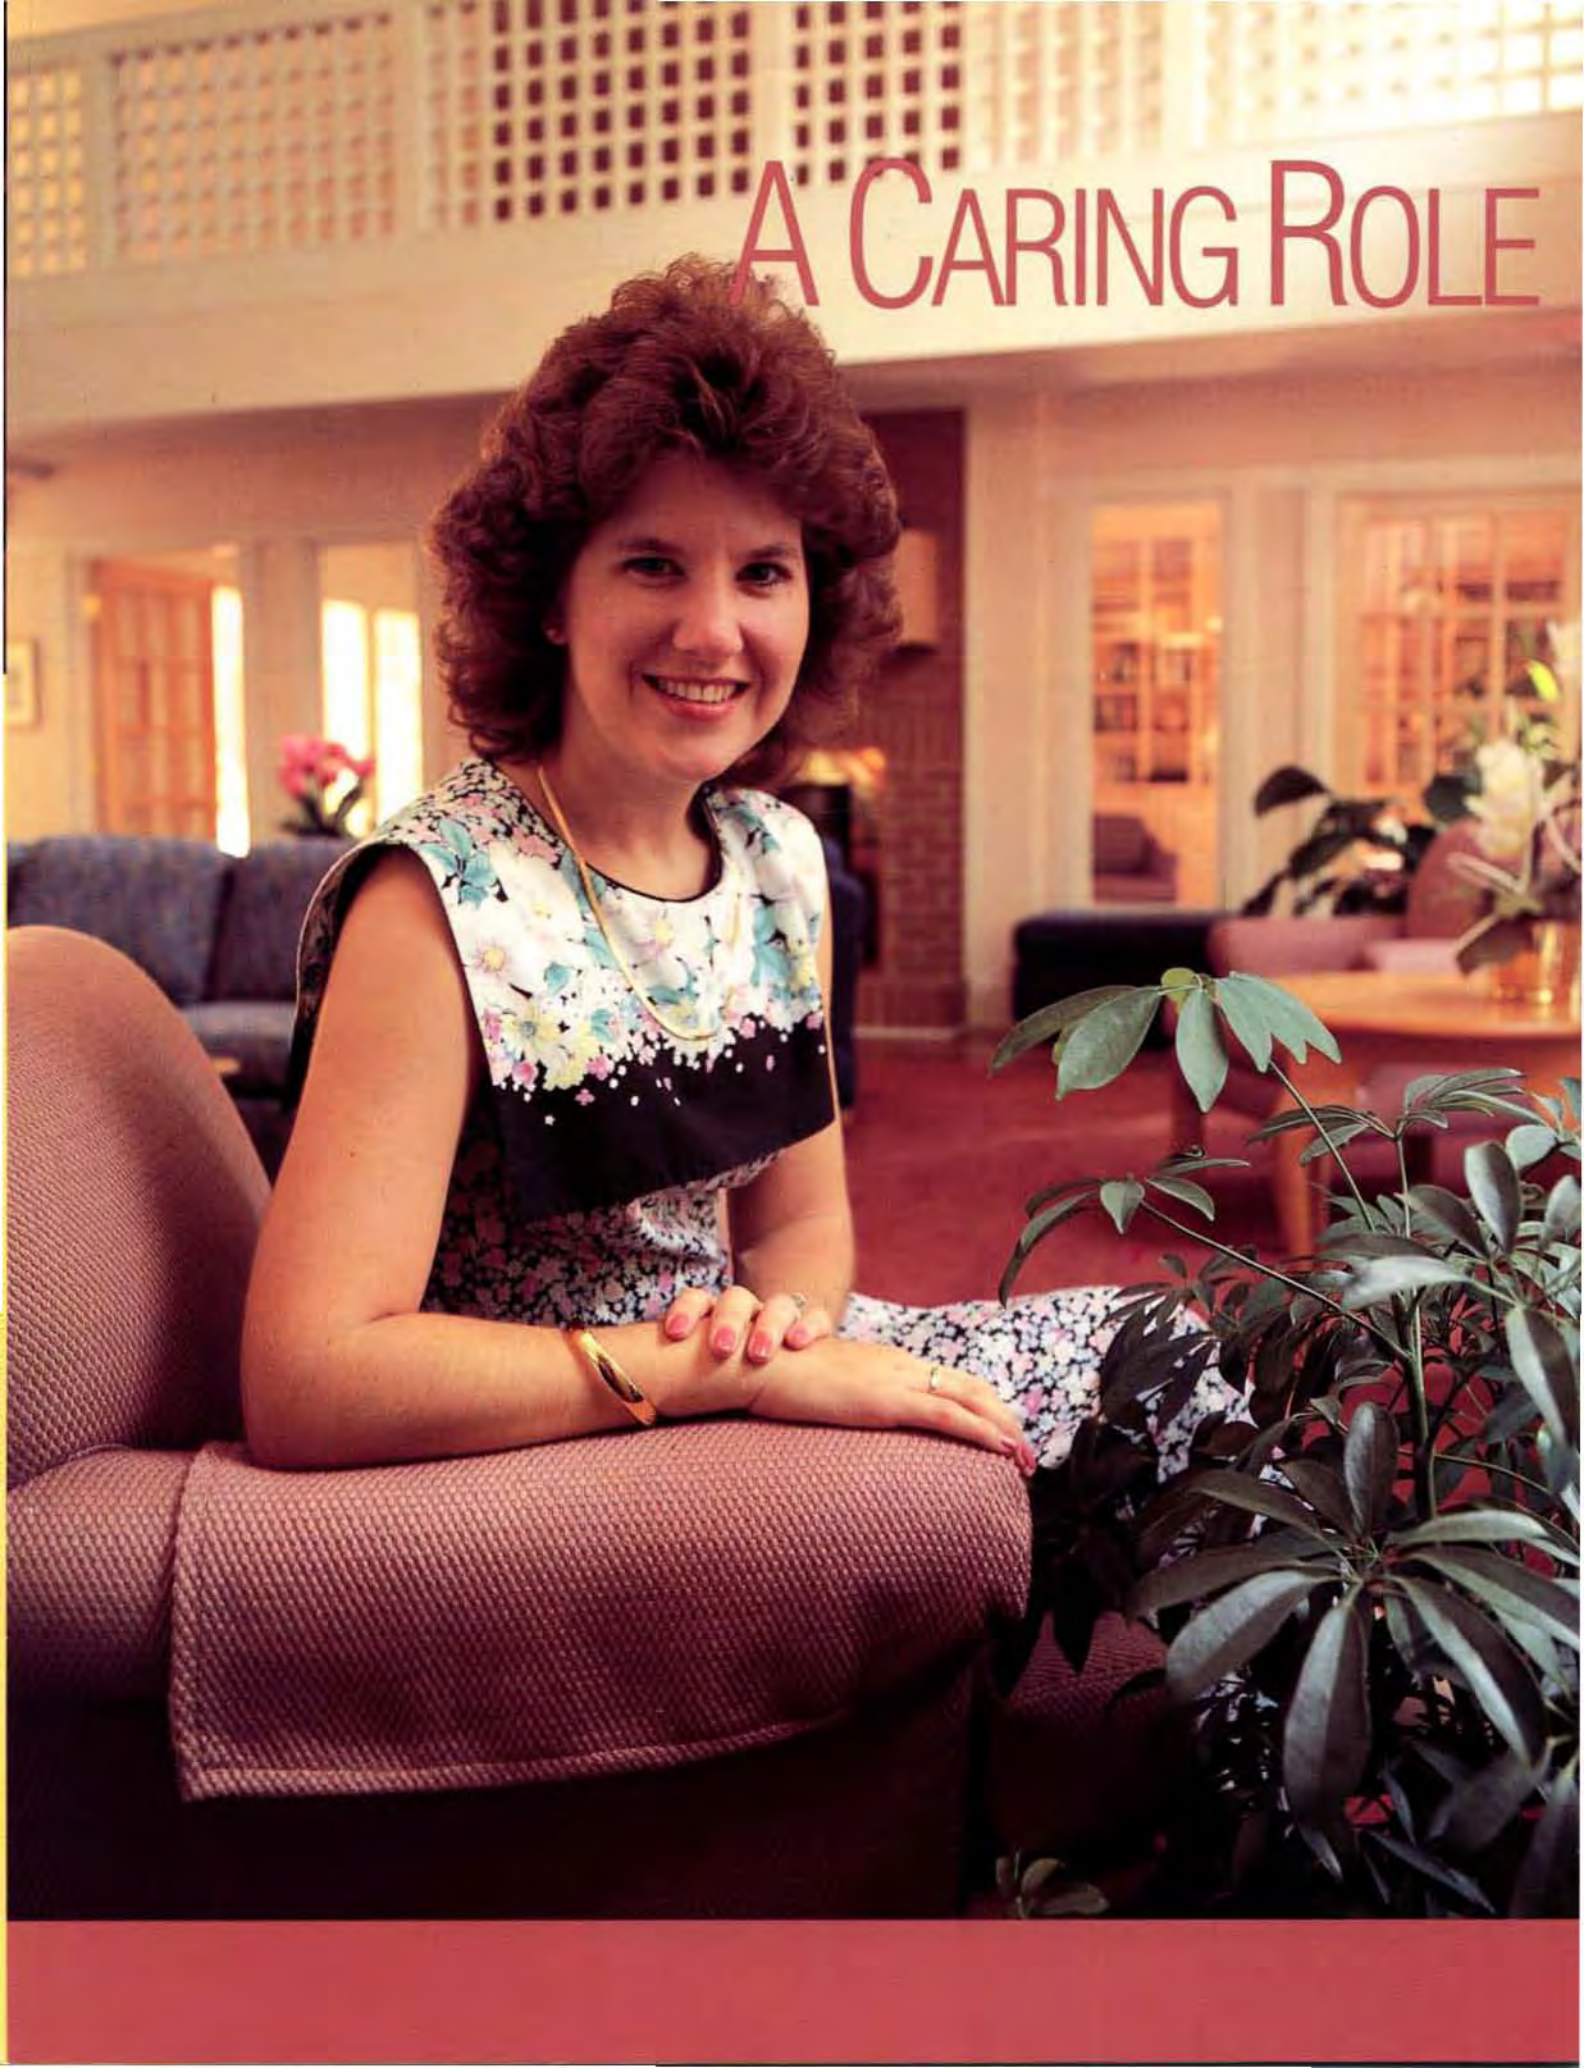
A Caring Role



Most newly married couples wouldn't expect to live in a 12-bedroom home their first year of marriage. Nor do most young wives expect to be balancing a $10,000 budget each month. But Patty Brenneman Good, a 1985 BJU office administration major and a May 1989 bride, is doing exactly that as the resident house manager of the Greenville (S.C.) Ronald McDonald House.

"It was a case of being in the right place at the right time," Patty says, referring to her position at the facility that provides accommodations for families with seriously ill children in area hospitals. Patty was a secretary with the Greenville Hospital System when the idea was first suggested. "I was in all the initial meetings of the board and eventually became the recording secretary. When they began interviewing for the house manager, several board members encouraged me to apply." Patty was hired in October 1987, and the house opened in April 1989.

She and her husband Tim live on site in a two-bedroom apartment. "Someone has to be here all the time—24 hours a day, seven days a week. My duties include managing, keeping the books, and making presentations to various civic organizations and churches. Freshman speech has definitely come in handy!"

Greenville's Ronald McDonald House is the120th such facility in the U.S., Canada and Europe. The first opened in 1974 in Philadelphia. The houses, located near major medical centers, are designed to provide accommodations for the families of seriously ill children. "There's a small fee, but it's waived if the family can't afford it," Patty says. Six to eight families stay at the house each night. The length of each stay varies: some stay just overnight; one mother stayed 78 days!

Patty admits that the job can be emotionally draining but it's rewarding as well. "I tell a lot of people I feel like Grandma Walton—everybody who checks into the house becomes a member of my family. We get very close. The parents often have mixed feelings about leaving even when their child gets well. So far we've had only one family whose child has died."

Helping the families spiritually is not an overt part of Patty's job description, but it often comes naturally as the families begin sharing their stories. "I tell them 'I don't understand why this happened, but I know from my experience that God won't let it happen without His being there.'"

Each bedroom has a Bible, Patty says, and "the families know they can come to me and have prayer. Sometimes they tell me to keep 'good thoughts,' and I say, 'Well, I'll pray for you.' And they know that every Sunday morning I've gone to church."

Patty's proud of the role the University played in the completion of the home.. "The Alumni Association accepted the project of raising money to provide a courtyard for the house. Although it was the first non-school-related project they had undertaken, it was very successful, as alumni gave over $9,000. It made an impression on this community, saying that BJ really does care!"

Patty says many might think her job is a glamorous one, but the demands of the job are far from glamorous. "I don't have time to do everything I want to do, but I didn't in college either. You do what you have to do. But I couldn't do it if my husband wasn't as patient as he is!" Patty's husband, Tim, keeps busy himself—he's a full-time student, a part-time monitor technician in the hospital's coronary care unit and in the Army Reserves.

More than anything else, Patty's attitude about the Lord's calling helps her to keep going. "You can't look at this as just a job. I look at it as a mission and a service. My mission field is right here—in this house with twelve bedrooms."■

A Change

Tim Potter hadn't always planned on coming to Bob Jones University. In high school, basketball was Tim's life, and he played nearly six hours a day. Although he knew that God had called him to preach and wanted him here at BJ, Tim seriously considered accepting one of the basketball scholarships offered as the result of his selection to the All-Ohio All Star basketball team. "I was conforming to God's will on the outside, but on the inside, I was rebelling. I wanted to see if I could make a college basketball team. Of course, I dreamed of making the pros after college since I wanted basketball to be my life, but at that point, that's all it was—a dream. God had to change my attitude."

Between his freshman and senior years of high school, Tim experienced a series of sports-related injuries to his knees and ankles requiring seven surgeries, including completely reconstructing his left knee and right ankle.

"Even after three surgeries, I still wanted to do what I wanted to do with my life—play basketball. Finally, God had to bring me to the point where I realized that He wasn't going to give in to my will. I needed to accept His best for me," Tim says. Although his injuries were so severe that he had trouble even walking, God has healed him almost completely. "Now I can play basketball without even wearing a brace."

Since coming to Bob Jones, Tim has been very involved in campus life. He sings in the University Chorale, plays for his society's basketball team, and serves as the secretary of the Preacher Boys class.

Tim also works off campus in order to help pay for his education. Besides having his own painting business with his brother, Tim works at Roadway "on all the days it rains."

Tim makes his summers as well as his school days count for Christ. For the past two years, Tim has worked as the youth pastor of his father's church, Grace Church of Mentor. This past summer, the BJU Minutemen team brought "The War" to his church, and instead of letting the enthusiasm die after the team left, Tim organized a "War Club" which met every Monday night for the kids in his city. Consequently, Tim saw his church youth group leap from 10 to 35 kids in just a few months. More importantly, he rejoiced in the 47 salvation decisions that resulted from this specific outreach.

"The War Club gives teenagers something spiritually accented to do that is different than youth groups or Sunday School," says Tim. "So many times kids get into trouble because no one takes an interest in them or gives them something they can do that is good, clean fun."

Tim also originated and leads the Chi Alpha Pi society extension group which travels to Spartanburg every week for a Teen Bible Club. "The guys break up into groups that do different outreaches each week. For instance, one group of guys will go to the park to pass out tracts and witness, another group will hit the streets of Spartanburg, and another will go to the basketball courts. We like to make friends with the ball players and earn their respect on the court first, because then they are more willing to listen to what we have to say about God."

"This extension has really been a blessing to every guy that has participated in it," says Tim. "We've seen nearly 200 salvation decisions. In fact, there are parents in the Spartanburg area who are trying to start a church there this year.

"Attending BJU isn't just classes and homework," Tim says. "It's fun as well. As a matter of fact, I met my girlfriend when I was a freshman, and I've made some lifelong friends here as well. Dorm life is also a good experience that you can't get in the classroom. You really get to know people personally when you live with them day in and day out—it's taught me how to get along with all sorts of people."

"God has used Bob Jones University in my life in many ways to prepare me for His service in the future," Tim says. "I'm glad that He didn't give in to my will, because then I would have had to settle for second best. And I have to give all the glory to Him, because without Him, I wouldn't be here today." ■

of Goals

Like Father,

Like Sons

When the Martin family gets together on Sunday evenings, discussion around the dinner table usually gravitates toward accounting, much to the exasperation of the Mrs. Martins who would probably prefer talking about most anything else. However, with four accountants in the family, the topic is difficult to avoid.

Jim Martin, 1954 BJ grad and accounting professor at the University, teaches Tax Procedures, Auditing, and Advanced Accounting . He is also the father of five children, three of which graduated with degrees in accounting. His oldest son, Ken, works for a company on the coast of South Carolina. Kevin, the second to the youngest, just graduated from BJU last year with an accounting degree. And Kris teaches accounting at the University.

A position on the University faculty was offered to Mr. Martin after he graduated, but he didn't feel he had enough experience. Several years later, he was living in the West looking for God's direction. "I called up Dr. Edwards and asked if the position was still open," Mr. Martin recalls. "He said, 'Yes, be here for the opening night of school.'"

Later, he opened his own accounting business in Greenville as well. "As early as I can remember, we worked over there cleaning and copying tax returns, just kind of working our way into accounting," Kris remembers. Mr. Martin didn't expect his sons to "follow in his footsteps" in their occupations and was surprised that three of his sons chose to study accounting. "He didn't push us one way or the other," Kris said.

Kris had his father for several of his classes, and, although most kids would feel awkward, it didn't really affect Kris. "I don't have the pressure of feeling like I have to perform up to what Dad is doing." In fact, he says "he was one of my favorite teachers."

How does Mr. Martin feel about teaching his kids? "You just try to forget that they're back there," he says. "I got good feedback from them around the dining room table at night, though."

After graduating in 1984, Kris received his CPA (Certified Public Accountant) certification and began working as a public accountant. He did not plan on teaching here but had decided to remain in public accounting for several years. "The Lord just changed my mind about it," he said. "Then the opportunity opened up at BJU, so I put in an application just to see. I was accepted, so my wife and I figured it must be the Lord's leading."

Kris teaches Principles of Accounting and the CPA review class, and has found that working in the same field as his father has several advantages and practically no negatives. "If I have a question about something I'm teaching, I always know that Dad will have an answer," Kris said. He doesn't have to make an appointment to see his father—he'll just stop him in the hall and say, "Hey Dad, I have a question . . ."

Kris credits his father's experience and wisdom in teaching largely to his accounting practice in town. "He has to learn the new laws every year to teach class, and at the same time it helps him with his practice. It works the other way too. He has so much practical experience that he can bring it into his teaching. I think that's what makes him a great teacher."

Another advantage of the father-son work relationship is that the family has remained very close. Every Sunday evening the entire Martin family gets together for dinner and perhaps a chess game, a game of basketball, or of course, an intriguing discussion of the new tax laws.■

BJU'S SCHOOL OF BUSINESS has a nationally recognized status as a quality provider of trained personnel. Many national accounting firms actively recruit job applicants on the BJU campus. For information on accounting or any of the more than 100 majors available at BJU, call 1-800-BJ-AND-ME.

1990 World Congress of Fundamentalists

London

July 16-20, 1990

Christians who stand for the infallibility of the Bible and obedience to the Scriptures will gather from all parts of the world for the 1990 World Congress of Fundamentalists, meeting in Westminster Central Hall, London, July 16-20, 1990. Vital subjects touching on evangelism, Christian witness, and defense of the faith will help to equip God's people for the final decade of the apostate 20th century and prepare them, if the Lord tarries, to meet the challenges of the 21st century. Preachers from various parts of the globe will challenge hearts with messages from the Word of God.

As the conference approaches, the congress offices in the United States and abroad will assist in arranging travel and accommodations as requested by participants.

THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

This past summer, while preaching at Camp Ironwood in southern California, I made friends with a 15-year-old Mexican young man who had run away from home at age seven and lived on the street until age fourteen. During those tender years of life when most of us had the privilege of home and health, he was subject to the ravages and exploitation of the world at its worst. He was a vagrant, traveling on buses, eating and sleeping wherever he could.

The mercy of God found him, and he was saved. Presently, he is under the care of the Welfare Department. His foster parent is a Christian. Slowly, he is beginning to learn, as the prodigal son, that it is better in the Father's house. He is beginning to benefit from the love, compassion, and tenderness which is found only in the household of faith. He drinks from refreshing streams. He is moving in the right direction.

Yet there are many privileged Christian young people who are moving in the wrong direction. Their lives are rich with spiritual heritage. They have never felt the bite of the Serpent. They were saved at an early age. They never had to drink from polluted streams, and the table of life spread before them has been full with heavenly delicacies and palatable offerings, like the children of Israel, who despised the heavenly manna and wanted meat like the heathen ate. Their souls loathe the good things from God's hand that He has prepared for them that love Him.

Maybe the greatest sin of believers in this hour is the thanklessness of our hearts toward God. We are corrupted by too much prosperity and are spoiled rotten. I don't want to be guilty of that, nor do I want the University to be.

For the parents who have trusted the University with the training of their children's lives and hearts, I am thankful. For the graduates whose lives and purpose have remained steadfast in the faith and who live with evangelistic zeal, I am thankful. The faculty have not labored with you in vain. For the friends who pray and sacrificially give, I thank you for being a co-laborer with us in this exciting challenge of conserving a generation for Christ to take His Gospel into the twenty-first century. We are all in this together, and we will all share in the heavenly reward.

To the Lord I express my thanks for allowing me to be a little part of it all.■

We Speak Your

Language

"I really believe the need is becoming greater for knowledge of foreign languages," says BJU senior Janet Case, a French major who also speaks Spanish. "Communication is so important. I feel strongly that more people should consider studying languages."

The department of modern languages at BJU helps hundreds of students learn French, German and Spanish as part of their college education. "We have full majors in each language, but we also serve students in a number of other majors, helping them meet their foreign language requirements," says Dr. Bruce Byers, chairman of the division of foreign language and literature. "Our program has a strong grammar base. It's a functional approach. We want our students ultimately to be able to express themselves competently in both speaking and writing."

Janet appreciates the goal-oriented approach of the language faculty. "They teach us to expect that we'll actually use the language. Instruction is very much life-related."

French major David Watkins points to the instruction he's had in French literature as a definite plus in his program. "One of my toughest—but most valuable—classes has been French Symbolist Literature. It helped me better understand the French mindset, something that will be important when I go to France someday as a pastor."

David also benefited from traveling to France on the BJU summer mission team directed by faculty member Rob Loach. "That was really where the rubber met the road," David says. "I got to preach in French for the first time. It was more difficult than witnessing to individuals who could immediately tell you if they understood!"

Students have the opportunity to travel with summer mission teams to Germany and Mexico as well. Seeing their knowledge of foreign languages really put to the test encourages students to study harder.

But it's not just on the mission field that language students can use their linguistic skills for the Lord. Spanish faculty member Marcy Wolsieffer reminds her students that the United States is the fifth largest Spanish-speaking country in the world. "I always take Spanish tracts with me to the grocery store!" Mrs. Wolsieffer says. Students may also get involved in a Spanish ministry sponsored by a local fundamental church.

A junior at BJU, Patty Parroquiano is a walking testimony of her belief in the importance of studying languages. Patty's first language is Spanish since her home is in Colombia, South America. "I studied English in Colombia before coming to BJ as a WORLD Fund student," Patty says. "And here my major is German, and I'm also taking French." Patty points to the University's well-equipped language lab as an important study tool for her speaking proficiency. The lab offers students a chance to hear language tapes as well as practice their own pronunciation.

Language clubs give the students a chance to practice their language skills in an informal atmosphere of songs, skits, travelogues and films. The clubs periodically stage dramatic productions of foreign plays, with students taking the roles, directing, and preparing the staging and costumes.

Most important, the students have the benefit of a competent and caring faculty. All have at least a master's degree in the foreign language that they teach, and all speak at native or near-native fluency. "The language faculty is unusually interested in the students," Janet says. "And the more interest we put forth, the more interest they show."

David agrees. "I'm thankful I came to BJ. You can't go wrong coming here for the language program."■

CAMPUS NEWS

Charleston Relief

Nearly 300 BJU students and faculty members volunteered to give their time and energy to help the citizens of Charleston clean up their town after the destruction of Hurricane Hugo.

Some of the students and faculty worked on a Saturday from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. at the Northside Baptist Church in Charleston hauling trash, cutting up trees, and doing general clean-up. Other volunteers unloaded supplies, sorted food, and helped out at the university relief center in a local mall. Also, 15 to 20 girls worked at the Greenville chapter of the Red Cross using their typing, filing and secretarial skills to help organize the mass of paperwork which has resulted from relief efforts around the state.

Dr. Otis Holmes, head of the Church Planting Department, headed up the Charleston Christian Relief Program in which 12 local fundamental churches worked together to help out the Christians in Charleston. Food, labor and money were given to the church to be distributed as needed.

Collegian Wins National Awards

The Collegian, BJU's student newspaper, has received a First rating in two different national competitions. Written and produced entirely by students, the newspaper is beginning its third year. Tim Flora is this year's editor, and the other staff members include Amy Biggs, Tom Bonnema, Ken Casillas, Stacy Cowles, Tina Crawford, Deanna Meadows, Heidi Nebergall, Jonathan Pait, Sean Sachon, Ted Slutz, Becky Smith, Andy Taylor, and Paul Whitt. University faculty and staff members Betty Solomon, Bo Clarke, and Dave McQuaid serve as advisors.

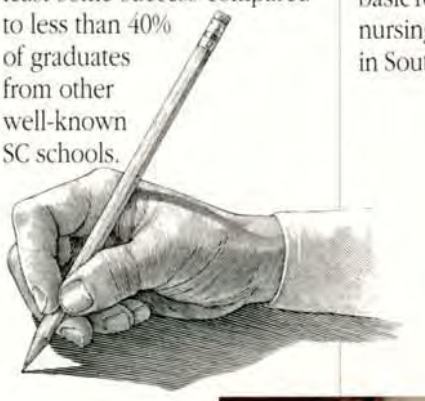
BJU Grads Do Well On CPA Exam

The South Carolina Board of Accountance reported that BJU graduates led all South Carolina schools in successfully completing the Certified Public Accountant examination in May 1989. Over half of the BJU students completed the exam with at least some success compared to less than 40% of graduates from other well-known SC schools.



Faculty Member Appointed To State Advisory Board

The South Carolina State Board of Nursing has appointed Mrs. Kathleen Crispin to the educator-at-large position of the Advisory Committee. She works with the subcommittee which reviews criteria for approving basic registered nursing programs in South Carolina.

Faculty Member Elected To Office

Mr. Chuck Nicholas, speech teacher at Bob Jones Academy, was recently elected the National Forensics League District Chair for South Carolina. This is his second year to be elected. He also received a "Distinguished Service Key" from the NFL for his efforts, one of only eight in the nation.

BJU Grad Has Paintings Commissioned

Mark Mulfinger, a 1984 BJU grad, is quickly becoming famous in the Carolinas for his batiks, a style of painting on cloth with wax. Mark was commissioned by the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children to create 26 batiks for their new hospital in Greenville.

Want To Go To Europe?

If you've always wanted to go to Europe, this coming summer has two great opportunities for you. The 1990 World Congress of Christian Fundamentalists is meeting in London July 16-20, 1990. "The Living Word for a Dying World" is the theme for this year's congress, and preachers from around the world will speak in morning and evening sessions. For more information, or to obtain a videotape for use in promoting the Congress, write World Congress of Christian Fundamentalists, P.O. Box 34555, Greenville, SC 29614.

Dr. Dwight Gustafson, dean of the School of Fine Arts, will be hosting a study tour of Europe June 29–July 15, 1990. The tour will visit Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and Germany, and will include concert and opera performances in several European cities as well as the world-famous Oberammergau Passion Play. For more information, write Unusual Tours, Bob Jones University, Greenville, SC 29614.

Students Send Bibles To Russia

After Georgi Vins, an exiled Russian pastor, spoke in chapel on the hunger of Russian Christians for the Bible, BJU students and faculty rallied together and sent over 1,200 Bible packets to the Soviet Union. Responding to this need, a group of students voluntarily raised $600 to send more spiritual literature to the pastors in Russia.

BJU To Host Home Schoolers Conference

June 4-8, 1990, Bob Jones University will host a national home school conference. The Home Educators' Leadership Program will be co-sponsored by the Bob Jones University Press. For more information, write HELP, Bob Jones University Press, Greenville, SC 29614.

BJU Opens Career Placement Office

An office of Career Development and Placement has been opened on the campus to help students in their search for jobs and careers. The office will be staffed by David Williams, a BJU grad with advanced degrees from Michigan State University. He has worked in general and special education, school psychology, curriculum, and administration for 31 years. Mr. Williams will help students with career and occupational decisions, resumes, business contacts, and preparation for job interviews.

BJA Student Places In National Debate Competition

Bryan Smith placed sixth in the nation in poetry at the 1989 National Debate Tournament held in Golden, Colorado. Brian was the only student from North or South Carolina to win a trophy. The Academy overall placed in the top 20 percent at the contest.

About the cover:

The recipients call them "care packages;" friends and roomates call them "share packages." But either way you look at it, a package from Mom & Dad or Grandma is always a welcome break from the woes of college life.

College Financing Tips

by Roy Barton
Director of Financial Affairs

Three years ago we introduced to you the Turn-of-the-Century Club. This is a prepayment program for parents, grandparents, or even friends of young people for whom you may want to prepay at today's college costs for future college enrollments.

The plan originally provided for just the students' first year of college. Later we added years two and three. Now, due to the success of the first three years' enrollment, we are delighted to extend the program to year number four. Therefore, it is now possible to prepay all four years of a child's education at today's rates if that child is due to enroll as a freshman in Bob Jones University during the years of 1993 through 2001.

If you have the goal of educating your child or grandchild at Bob Jones University, this program can help you do that and do it while saving a great deal of money compared to the future projected high cost of education.

You can pay in one lump sum, semi-annually, quarterly, or monthly. As long as you start you Club payments by May 31, 1990, you can take up to 24 months to complete your payment program. You can pay for more than one child, as long as they will be freshmen at BJU between 1993 and 2001. If for any reason your child is not able to attend BJU, every penny of the money you've paid into the Club will be refunded to you.

The Turn-of-the-Century Club offers parents the opportunity to lock in their children's future college education at today's prices. If you think your child may be attending BJU in the next few years, please consider this program. It could be just the way to help your children at a time when they need your financial help the most.

Grandparents, too, can join the Turn-of-the-Century Club. Proverbs 13:22 says, "A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children," and I can't think of a better gift grandparents can give their grandchildren than providing for their first year or first two years of college here at "The Opportunity Place."

Our program has enrolled approximately 150 children so far, and we expect that number to increase rapidly as folks discover the potential of savings and the thrill of being able to help your children in the years to come.

If you have an interest, complete the postcard contained at the center of this magazine, and a brochure will be sent to you, or call (803) 242-5100, extension 3020.■

DO NOT PASS GO!

Not until you've looked at BJUopoly, the new board game about Bob Jones University. BJUopoly is based on Parker Brothers' famous game, but adds new twists that make it unique to BJU. If you roll doubles three times, you don't go to jail, you go to the Discipline Committee! Boardwalk has been replaced by the Administration Building, and there's no $75.00 Luxury tax— it's a Parking Fine!

The money is decorated with caricatures of BJU administrators, and houses and hotels are now credits and diplomas. Supply is limited, so order your BJUopoly now for only $19.95!

Where Quality is Right at Home

One of the most important aspects to consider when choosing a college is the environment in which you'll live.

At Bob Jones University, we believe that the dormitory can be as educational as the classroom. It's in the dorms that you'll learn to live with others in harmony, to help them and to support them in prayer. You'll feel right at home in our comfortable dorms, and you'll make lifelong friendships, too.

A Bob Jones University education is a unique blend of classes, dorm life, chapel services, and many beneficial extra-curricular activities. Every part of your education works to build the quality Christian character you'll need to meet almost any situation in life.

Find out why more than 50,000 students have attended BJU. Call 1-800-BJ-AND-ME.* We'll send you a FREE Personal Opportunity Profile made especially for you, with details on any of our more than 100 exciting major programs. You'll see what facilities you'll get to use, just what you'll study, and what graduates in your field are doing.

Let us welcome you home to Bob Jones University. *(In SC call 242-5100)
